After the Party

home of work.

If you made it out of there with anything that could incriminate you, don’t talk about it. Don’t reminisce after the fact. Don’t incriminate yourself or others by bragging about anything illegal you did or talking about what other people did. This includes speculating about who might have done what. Doing so is confessing to a crime, or providing evidence in your own or others’ cases. It’s not smart, and that information isn’t anybody’s business.

Speaking of evidence, don’t post pictures online of what happened, especially on social media – and if you see any, don’t tag anyone in them! That is doing the cops’ work for them.

And obsv: no one likes a snitch. Don’t be that guy.

Keep your own and your friends’ secrets, and you’re that much more likely to be free for the next party. You know you want to go.

Stay safe and stay safe while playing dangerously!

good manners for street parties: stay safer while playing dangerously

So, there you are, hanging out with your friends, and suddenly the street around you erupts into a riotous party. Sweet! Unfortunately, cops are drawn to these things like flies to honey. If you decide to join in, or just get caught up in it, here are some tips for keeping yourself and others as safe as possible.

As soon as cops say it’s an unlawful assembly, it is. And obvs: that’s an unlawful assembly! Don’t argue with the police. If the police aren’t there, they can also arrest you if you’re playing dangerously.

Cameras are everywhere. Whether they’re in stores, on streetlights, or in people’s pockets, they can provide evidence against you or other people – and let’s not even talk about facial recognition software. Covering your face can help prevent you from being identified. An easy way to do this is make a mask.

Don’t reminisc after the fact. Not even with the other people you were there with. I know, that thing was just the best, but really. It may seem harmless, but people have gone down for doing just that – even with people they ran with and trusted before. You should be especially wary if someone you haven’t seen in a while comes around acting strangely. If something doesn’t feel right, it probably isn’t.

Don’t incriminate yourself or others by bragging about anything illegal you did or talking about what other people did. This includes speculating about who might have done what. Doing so is confessing to a crime, or providing evidence in your own or others’ cases. It’s not smart, and that information isn’t anybody’s business.

Speaking of evidence, don’t post pictures online of what happened, especially on social media – and if you see any, don’t tag anyone in them! That is doing the cops’ work for them.

And obsv: no one likes a snitch. Don’t be that guy.

Keep your own and your friends’ secrets, and you’re that much more likely to be free for the next party. You know you want to go.
An Introduction to the Anarchist Affinity Group

Sorry, everyone. There is no official organization to join to become an anarchist. Because of this, anarchism has confused many people who are used to normal political organizations or groups. Anarchists appear nearly spontaneously amidst the human population of the world. Their individual beliefs assuredly vary, but the central unifying belief is that there should be no government. Another unifying belief is that people should not be governed, nor should they govern themselves, but instead they should decide their own fates based on free association.

The purpose of this article, however, is not to present the philosophy of anarchism, but to instead highlight some tactics anarchists have employed to change and remedy their immediate situations.

If you are an anarchist in Seattle and are looking for “the anarchists,” look no further than your closest friends. These are the people you must act with, because they are the only people you can trust. If your friends are also anarchists, you can talk endlessly about philosophy and the news, but this will eventually grow boring and pointless. If you want to begin to change

...and your local library!

Huck in all your efforts. Because weapons like tets and flashlights are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. These are our people to hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective. To hunt at the rear, your force minus their advantage is our objective.